The Mitchell Boys

of Moose Jaw go riding across the prairies every season, intent on respirating their repertoire of rhyme and frontier humour for the good folk of Saskatchewan. Their shows include Rhyming Wranglers, No Ordinary Cowboy, and Service with a Smile. The latter features the poems and stories of Yukon pioneer Robert Service, and first premiered at Regina's "Artesian on 13" last March.

Brother Slim is a cowboy poet, concrete engineer, and performer. At his XM Bar spread just south of Moose Jaw, he wrangles dogs, cats, cement trucks and potbelly porkers -- all the while devoted to his three children and lovely Missus, Cyrenne.

Brother Don is a city councillor and former mayor of Moose Jaw, and organic food producer, and the author of The Politics of Food. He is also a Scottish dancer and a piper with the Celtic folk band, Desperate for Haggis.

Brother Ken is a theatre producer, playwright, former English professor, and entrepreneur. His dramas such as Cruel Tears, The Hounds of Notre Dame, Gone the Burning Sun, and Heroes have been performed worldwide.

Niece Joule Tallman is the Mitchell clan's prime protege and, so far, most eloquent musician. She is also a rancher, horse trainer, farrier and cow performer, who lives in the Vanscoy district. We are not allowed to reveal her taste in men or liquor.
